VIRG. ÆNEID. Lib. I.

RIDING upon the Road the other Day, by way of an Airing, I heard the Cry of Hounds, and my Horſe (for want of Exerciſe) grew Headſtrong, and carried me in the midſt of them.

I formerly lik'd the Diverſion as much as any Man, and cannot but ſay the Muſick of a full Pack is pleaſing to this Day. I muſt acknowledge I was highly delighted with the Sight, which was quite new to me: The Hounds were coupled in the following Manner, viz.

A Keen Dog, - - - and an Idle Dog.
An Ugly Dog, - - - and a Handſome Dog.
A Clumſy Dog, - - - and a Light Dog.
A Sprightly Dog, - - and a Sluggiſh Dog.
An Ingenious Dog, - - and a Stupid Dog.
A Good-humour'd Dog, - and a Snarling Dog.
A Vicious Dog, - - and a Pleaſant Dog.
A Merry Dog, - - - and a Sad Dog.
A Clean Dog, - - - and a Naſty Dog.
A Senſible Dog, - - - and a Fooliſh Dog.
A Faithful Dog, - - - and a Wand'ring Dog.
In all Eleven Couple.

After I had taken a thorough View of them, I went away: I had not gone a Quarter of a Mile, but the Gentleman, that was Maſter of the Hounds, overtook me, and preſs'd me to go to his Houſe and dine with him. I accepted of his Offer; and met with an elegant Entertainment, and a round Company.

In a few Hours, my Companions began to be mellow; each Man took off his Maſk, and ſhew'd himſelf in his proper Colours; in a very little Time they were all Speakers, then Silent for a while; at laſt, one of the Gentlemen grew jocular, and a churliſh Fellow not reliſhing it, let fall his Lip, knit his Brows, and look'd ſurly. Here, a merry Mortal gave him a Tap on the Shoulder, --- honeſt Jack, drink about, --- which brought him to. Soon after, the Company were exceeding wiſe, and a ſilly Fellow began a Story; and before he had got Half way through, forgot his Diſcourſe, and deſired to be inform'd what he was talking about. An ill-natur'd Chap that lay upon the Catch, reply'd, Fools (like young Girls) ſhould be ſeen, and not heard. Some ſwore; others laugh'd. As to my Part, I expected they would go together by the Ears; but it paſſed off.

Soon after, one of the Company entertain'd us with a Traveller's Story, that took up at leaſt Half an Hour: His next Neighbour pulling him by the Sleeve, whiſper'd him loud enough for the Company to hear, ------ Tom, Tom! this muſt be a Gun! ----- which brought on a Horſe Laugh. High Words aroſe, and I thought of nothing leſs than a Duel; but a grave Gentleman immediately ſoften'd them with an Ita videtur, and ſet all Things right again.

Night coming on, I took an Opportunity, and ſtole out of the Room, call'd for my Horſe and mounted. The Gentleman of the Houſe ſuſpecting my Intention, came to the Door, call'd after me, and entreated me (with a great deal of good Nature, Complaiſance, and good Breeding,) to ſtay all Night; but I beg'd to be excus'd.

Sir, ſays he, perhaps you apprehend the Company may be refractory; but I aſſure you there is nothing in it. You ſeem'd to take Notice, in Regard to the Coupling of my Hounds, and was pleas'd with them. This, Sir, is only a Repreſentation of what you ſaw in the Field: For I look upon the World to be a Jack-wheel; and were it not for this Contraſt of Turn-ſpits, 'twould either ſtand ſtill, or move too faſt. We complimented each other, and ſo parted.

If we conſider with ourſelves, there is no greater Argument of a Man's Wiſdom, than an abſolute Command of his Temper. A Man may be reſerv'd and modeſt in Diſcourſe, and yet accommodate himſelf to all Companies. A flexible and managable Spirit will riſe and fall with the Company; be pleaſant or ſerious, keep Pace, and conſtantly make one: Whereas, on the contrary, Pedants and Sophiſters, to ſhew their Parts, will maintain an Argument, right or wrong: Which, in my Opinion, are full as bad as arrogant Coxcombs, that obſerve neither Form or Order in their Diſcourſe; but are for ever making impertinent Digreſſions and Excurſions, which is the Bane of Converſation.

A RAPSODY, occaſioned by a Review of the Common Miſery of Human Kind, eſpecially in that Part of the World called Great-Britain.

SCARCE Egypt's Land more dire Diſaſters knew,
Than we are daily deſtin'd to run thro'.
Exempli gratia, Rheumatiſm, Corns,
Itch, Agues, Jaundice, Jealouſy, and Horns;
Cramp, Gout, Stone, Cholick, Chancery-Suits for Life,
The Jilting Miſtreſs, or the Brawling Wife;

From the London Weekly Journal.

The following, is a no leſs true than remarkable Inſtance of His Majeſty's Goodneſs and Clemency, extended to one of the meaneſt of his Subjects, viz. one John Hurſt, a Soldier in Col. Chudleigh's Regiment, quartered at Exeter, who was ſentenced to be ſhot to Death for Deſertion; but ſome few Days before the intended Execution, writing a Letter to his Sweetheart, who lived with a certain great Lord in London; to whoſe Hands the Letter coming by Accident, his Lordſhip immediately ſent it to the Secretary of War, who cauſed it to be tranſlated into French, and preſented to His Majeſty; who conſidering the Meanneſs of the Man, and the admirable Stile of his Letter, immediately ordered his Pardon, tho' no manner of Interceſſion had been made for that Purpoſe. The Letter is as follows; the Original whereof is now in the War-Office, and Copies deſired by moſt of the Nobility.

Dear Nanny,

THESE unhappy mournful Lines will inform you, that we muſt now ſeparate for ever, and never more behold each other; for, ſince my Departure from London, my Poverty and ſmall Debts made me fly for Succour to a fatal Remedy; I was obliged for Safety to liſt for a Soldier, and not being us'd to the Hardſhips they impoſe, in a ſhort Time I deſerted, and was within Three Days after taken Priſoner, and brought back to the Caſtle. In Fifteen Days after my Confinement, a Court Martial was called, where I was condemned, and am the Sixth of next Month to ſuffer Death with another poor Wretch as miſerable, if poſſible, as my ſelf. I muſt think my Doom ſevere; but it is too late to repent; and I do not, nor I cannot juſtly blame any Body but my ſelf: But my Life might have been prolonged, had not the Cruelty of Mr. -- -- drove me to this Extremity; for what could he expect, but an untimely End of one brought up to no Trade or Calling, and yet abandoned to the World, and forced to ſeek his Bread. I am ſorry I did not acquaint him of my Misfortune, but I was afraid it had been in vain; perhaps, when I am gone, he may relent and pity me. I wiſh ſome happy Cauſe had been the Subject of my Pen; but the braveſt muſt ſubmit when Fortune frowns. I thank God I have learned that Moral Philoſophy, NOT TO FEAR DEATH. And I believe the Crime, for which I am to ſuffer, will be no Barr to my future Happineſs, if I can make my Peace with Heaven for the many Sins and Follies of my Youth, which I do unfeignedly repent of. But before I end this doleful Tale, I muſt make this my laſt Requeſt, that you would favour me with a Line, which will be a great Comfort to me in the midſt of my Afflictions. If you have forgot our paſt, tho' unhappy Loves, let Friendſhip plead in your tender Boſom on my Behalf: I believe once I had ſome ſmall Intereſt there, and tho' I have not carried my ſelf as I ought, my Sufferings now claim your Pity and your Pardon; and may Heaven in Return, reward you with eternal Bleſſings, which was always my ſincere and hearty Wiſh: I deſire no mournful Heart for me, neither let my Misfortune trouble you; but at Night let your Heart breathe a fervent Prayer for the unhappy Wretch, who whilſt Life remains will be only yours,

JOHN HURST.

We have an Account from Paris of a young Woman who ſerv'd Four Years as a Grenadier in the Regiment of Bourbonnois, and did Wonders during the late War, where ſhe fought to be foremoſt on all Occaſions. This was fully atteſted in her Diſcharge, and ſet forth in a Petition, which ſhe preſented in Man's Cloathes to the King at Compiegne, in order to obtain ſome particular Encouragement.

The following Lines were wrote by a Gentleman of Virginia.

To a LADY.

On a SCREEN of Her WORKING.

A NEW CREATION charms the raviſh'd Sight;
Delightful Harmony of Shade and Light!
ART vies with NATURE in a doubtful Striſe,
The finiſh'd Copy, which and which the Life.
The Blooming Flow'rs the painted Bow excel;
The gay Deluſion courts, and cheats the Smell.
What Beauty does ANEMONE diſcloſe!
What fluſhing Glories the CARNATION ſhews!
The TULIP here diſplays her motley Pride;
The PIONY there in richeſt Crimſon dy'd.
The HYACINTH, tho' rais'd by Phœbus' Pow'r,
Derives from Female Skill a fairer Flow'r.
The POPPY with lethargic Force oppreſt,
Her Scarlet Head reclines upon her Breaſt;
So Henley's drooping Hearers ſink to Reſt.
Incircling Beams the SUN-FLOW'R's Orb ſurround;
With flaming Gold RENUNCULA is crown'd.
Array'd in Snowy Treſſes LILLIES ſhine,
Pure as Her Mind that form'd the neat Deſign.
The ROSE here buds, there opens ev'ry Grace;
So modeſt Bluſhes ſtain the Virgin Face.
Here we admire the NIGHT-SHADE's darker Blue;
The twining WOOD-BIND there of various Hue.
Here Silver Blooms of Golden ORANGE blow;
STOCK-GILLY-FLOWERS there, and JONQUILS glow,
And Leaves of chearful GREEN the Ground beſtrew;
Refreſhing Green, from Age preſerve thoſe Eyes,
By which You flouriſh in immortal Dies.

LONDON,

Auguſt 5. They write from Baſle, in Swiſſerland, that Three Barrels of Powder having accidentally taken Fire in the Houſe of one of the Inhabitants of Aurole, a Village ſituated at the Bottom of Mont Goddard, in the Canton of Ury, the Flames ſpread with ſuch Fury, that the whole Village was reduced to Aſhes in leſs than Three Hours Time, the Church was alſo intirely conſumed, and nothing of the rich Ornaments thereof could be ſaved; but this is not all, the Wind being very high, drove the Sparks to the Village of Valle, which was alſo burnt to the Ground, and had it not been for timely Aſſiſtance, the Village of Magran would have ſuffered the ſame Fate, and as it was, Three Houſes were quite deſtroyed.

The Weather has been ſo exceſſive hot at Paris, that the Aſtronomers of the Obſervatory remarked, that on the 23d of laſt Month, the Degree of Heat was greater than it has been in that Country for 50 Years paſt. It has been much the ſame all over France, ſo that the Wines this Year will be very plenty and good.

Mean Time, from ſeveral Parts of Germany, &c. there are great Complaints of Rains and Innundations, particularly in Upper Sileſia and the neighbouring Provinces, where the Damages done by the overflowing of the the Rivers are computed at ſeveral Millions of Florins; the Dykes having been broke in ſeveral Places by the Violence of the Torrents; ſo that for ſeveral Leagues nothing was to be ſeen but Water; and a great many People and Cattle have been drowned.

The greateſt Part of the City of Munich, has been lately overflowed by the River of Iſer, the Water of which having made its Way to the Palace, had in a Manner utterly deſtroyed the fine Garden contiguous to it; and the delightful Caſtle of Schlorheim, belonging to the Elector of Bavaria, had likewiſe ſuffered very much by it. The Lake de Vall, which is towards Tirol, has alſo laid Three neighbouring Monaſteries under Water, which has occaſioned an inexpreſſible Loſs. All the Advices too from ſeveral Places along the Danube, mentioned the great Miſchief done by the overflowing of that River. The Bridge of Stein near Crems, has been carried away by the Rapidity of the Waters, and on both Sides of its Banks a great Number of dead Bodies and Goods have been ſeen floating. And they write from Cologn, that at Elfkin and other Places in the Lower Dioceſe, there has been a violent Storm, mixed with Hail of an extraordinary Size, which has done vaſt Detriment to the Corn and Fruits.

We hear from Wirſtable in Kent, That Two Gentlemen, one of the Black Gown, and the other of the Faculty, occaſionally falling out, they irritated one another to ſuch a Degree, that Vollies of Oaths were diſcharged on both Sides: Upon which, each inform'd againſt the other, before a Bench of Juſtices, who ordered them to pay a Fine according to the Act of Parliament, or ſit in the Stocks; the former of which they refuſing, the latter was inflicted on them; and they accordingly ſat 2 Hours apiece, to the no ſmall Diverſion of the Populace.

Laſt Week Three Ruffians met a young Woman in the Fields near Iſleworth, and offered to lie with her, which ſhe refuſing, they proceeded to Violence, Two of them holding her, whilſt the Third had his Will of her alternately. Upon her ſtruggling with them, they beat her cruelly, tore one of her Nipples off, and abuſed her to that Degree, that ſhe died on Tueſday of the Injuries ſhe received.

On Sunday laſt, a Seafaring Man of about 56 Years of Age having had his Pocket pick'd of ſeveral Guineas by ſome lewd Women, at a Houſe, near Horſly down New Stairs, was ſo exaſperated at his Loſs, that in order to prevent any future Temptations of that Kind, he cut off his Privities: He was immediately carried to St. Thomas's Hoſpital, where, notwithſtanding the utmoſt Care, he died on Monday Night of the Wound.

The Town has been ſurpris'd lately with the Fame of a young Woman at Epſom, who, tho' not very regular, it is ſaid, in her Conduct, has wrought ſuch Cures that ſeem miraculous in the Bone-ſetting Way; even the crooked ſhe has render'd ſtrait, and thoſe that have been lame for ſeveral Years ſhe has ſet a walking, to the great Aſtoniſhment of the Beholders. But notwithſtanding all her Art, and the Relief ſhe brought to the Unfortunate, ſhe was reſolved to ſupply other Wants; and happening to caſt an Eye on one Mapp, a Servant to Mr. Ibberſon the Mercer, ſhe determined to give herſelf to him as a Wife; but great Application was made to her by the Gentlemen and Ladies in and about the Town of Epſom, not to carry her Purpoſe into Execution; however, all their Importunities availed nothing: She ſaid ſhe would never come near the Town again, if they oppoſed her Marriage any farther. In ſhort, ſhe was followed by ſeveral Coaches, and People on Horſeback, on the Road, there being ſeveral unhappy Creatures waiting at Epſom for their Cure, and among the reſt, a Child brought by Sir James Edwards, in his Chariot, whoſe Neck was diſlocated, ſo as to lie double for near Two Inches; but ſhe would not undertake the Cure, 'til they let her go peaceable and be married, but promiſed to return aſſoon as the Ceremony was over, and make that her firſt Operation. She was accordingly married to Mr. Hill Mapp, at St. Allhallow's Church, on Wedneſday Morning.

Auguſt 10. Laſt Friday Morning, the Right Honourable the Lord Baltimore came to Epſom, and was preſent, with many Ladies and Gentlemen, and ſaw Mrs. Mapp perform an Operation on the Daughter of the Widow Armſtead, a Shoemaker in Gracechurch-Street, a young Woman of 14 Years of Age, whoſe Shoulder, Elbow, and Wriſt were out, which ſhe performed ſo much to his Lordſhip's Satisfaction, that he gave her five Guineas, tho' he was there only as a Spectator, ſaying, it was to encourage her for the public Good.

On Saturday Evening, a Seaman, with 2 Men, whom he call'd Cuſtom-houſe Officers, went to the Houſe of Mrs. Sharp, in Wapping, from whence they took a Parcel of Bruſſels Lace to a great Value, and about 200lb. of Tea. Application having been made to ſome Officers of the Cuſtoms upon it, they were poſitive that neither of the Perſons belonged to the Cuſtom-houſe. This is the ſecond Fraud of the Kind that has happened within theſe Four Months.

'Tis not queſtion'd but the Adriatick Sea will be ſoon ſcoured of Pyrates, and the Venetian Trade raiſed to the higheſt Pitch, by the extraordinary Encouragement and Privileges newly granted by that Republic. The Ships to be built for the Purpoſes above-mentioned are to be 60 Feet in the Keel; and the Undertakers of them are to be furniſhed with 200 Pieces of Oak, worth Half a Ducat each, and with 20 Workmen from the Arſenal for Three Months running, at the Expence of the Public. Beſides, they may be provided with Soldiers and Cannon upon very eaſy Terms, and no Duty to be paid for Goods going in or coming out.

A very extraordinary Cauſe was try'd at Hertford Aſſizes, on an Action brought againſt the Defendant, for debauching the Plaintif's Daughter, both Perſons of Fortune, and having a Child by her, under Marriage Promiſes. A ſpecial Jury gave her 150 l. Damages, and directed her to bring an Action in her own Right upon a Marriage Contract.

Auguſt 24. A fatter Boar was hardly ever ſeen, than one taken up the other Day, coming out of Fleet Ditch into the Thames: It prov'd to be a Butcher's, near Smithfield-Bars, who had miſt him 5 Months, all which Time, he had been in the common Sewer, and was improv'd in Price, from 10 s. to 2 Guineas.

Aug. 24. Charles Craven, Eſq; is appointed Governor of South Carolina, in the Room of Governor Johnſon, deceaſed.

Thomas Pelham, Eſq; Member for Lewes, in Suſſex, appointed Envoy Extraordinary to the Court of Sweden.

The Lady of Lord Archibald Hamilton, made Privy Purſe to the Princeſs of Wales.

Auguſt 27. The Right Hon. Sir Charles Wager, Knt. Firſt Lord Commiſſioner of the Admiralty, was declared by his Phyſicians to be abſolutely out of Danger. This is the Report made to Her Majeſty by Dr. Hollings.

His Majeſty's Yatchts are order'd to be dock'd and cleaned, in order to be ready to ſail for Holland about the 8th of September next.

Auguſt 28. We hear, that ſince the Miſunderſtanding happened between Spain and Portugal, his Portugueſe Majeſty has bought in England, Arms, Accoutrements, &c. to the Value of 80 000 l.

Auguſt 30. The Cures performed by the Woman Boneſetter of Epſom, are too many to be enumerated: Her Bandages are extraordinary Neat, and her Dexterity in reducing Diſlocations and ſetting of fractured Bones wonderful. She has cured Perſons who have been above 20 Years diſabled, and has given incredible Relief in the moſt difficult Caſes. The Lame came daily to her, and ſhe got a great deal of Money, Perſons of Quality who attended her Operations, making her Preſents. Her Father it ſeems, is one Mr. Wallin, a Boneſetter in Wilts. The Money ſhe got procured her a Husband; but he did not ſtay with her above a Fortnight, and then went off with 100 Guineas.

Auguſt 31. This Month, the Parliament of Paris adjudged an Eſtate to Madamoiſelle de Vigny, who had lived 50 Years without knowing who were her Parents. This was the Caſe: M. Ferrand, Preſident of one of the Chambers of Juſtice in Paris, had been many Years married, and had no Iſſue, at length his Wife was with Child; on which the old Gentleman was uneaſy, and pretended to be certain he was not Father of it. The Moment it was born, born, he ordered it to be taken out of his Houſe: The Midwife carried it to a Church to be chriſtened; but a Diſpute ariſing about the proper Name it ſhould be regiſtred by, M. Ferrand entered a Proteſt againſt calling it by his, and there remained a Blank in the Book to the Time of the Trial. The Girl was put to a common Nurſe, and now and then relieved, but never viſited, by the Mother, nor at all made acquainted with her Parents, 'til the Midwife found her out, and by her Perſonal Evidence, prov'd the above Circumſtances.
